Apollo 13 – a happy ending!

You probably know about Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin – the first men on the Moon. They landed there in the spacecraft Apollo 11 on July 20, 1969. 600 million people watched them! But did you know that other Apollo missions went to the Moon? In fact, Apollo 13 was nearly a disaster.

Apollo 13 left Florida, USA on April 11, 1970. It had two parts – the Command Module and the Lunar Module. There were three astronauts – Jim Lovell, Fred Haise and Jack Swigert. One man, Ken Mattingly, didn't go because he was ill.

After two days, on April 13, there was an explosion. It damaged the Command Module. The astronauts were in danger. They told Mission Control, 'We have a problem here.' There was only enough air for 15 minutes! So they moved to the Lunar Module.

In the Lunar Module there wasn't much power, food, water or air. They couldn't breathe, because the air was bad. But they repaired the oxygen container with a plastic bag and a sock! They could breathe again.

Now they had one big problem. They were 321,800 kilometres from Earth and they didn't have enough power to get back. Mission Control decided to send the astronauts towards the Moon. Then gravity could pull the spacecraft back to Earth without power.

It was a race against time. Back on Earth Ken Mattingly saved his friends' lives, too. The astronauts couldn't use their computers so Ken guided them to Earth. It was very dangerous. But they landed in the Pacific Ocean on April 17 at 1:07 pm. The men were alive – and heroes!
